

Tee It Up

Photograph courtesy of Bulle Rock

Maryland's top public course is the site of the new Residences at Bulle Rock in Havre de Grace.

THE RESIDENCES AT Bulle Rock (410-939-8700; bullerockresorthomes.com) in Havre de Grace sit along Maryland's number-one public course, a Pete Dye design that's earned five stars from Golf Digest. Ellen and Chris Kelly of Falls Church bought a vacation home there in 2005. Bulle Rock attracted the pair because of its sociability. Says Ellen, "Living in the DC area, there's this hustle and bustle, and we thought, 'Wouldn't it be nice to be in a place where we can feel relaxed but still be in a community?'"

That sociability includes Friday happy hours and clubs organized by interests, such as books and winetasting. A tent is reserved for residents during the LPGA tournament, which Bulle Rock will host for the third time in June. The community center opening next month includes a fitness center offering exercise classes, indoor/outdoor pools, and an Internet cafe. The developers also plan a marina and yacht club. Meanwhile, the Kellys Jet-Ski on a nearby river and enjoy Havre de Grace's quaint shops and restaurants.

Some 2,000 homes are being developed. All homes have first-floor master suites. Single-family houses start at $450,000 to $800,000, condos $250,000 to $350,000, and villas $300,000 to $500,000.

This villa at the Residences at Bulle Rock includes space for entertaining and relaxation. A marina is planned nearby.